

The Society of Physics Students (SPS) group here at Marshall also participated in the solar eclipse on August 21st, 2017. This was an event hosted by the College of Science as well as West Virginia's Science Adventures. This was a huge event with thousands of people. Our SPS group helped organized so that several Dobsonian telescopes were available on Buskirk field for the public. They also helped with set-up and tear down for the event, participated in practice runs for telescope training, and spent a good part of the ~ 3-hour event running our tracking telescope with an additional high school volunteer student.
